Apple Health for Newborns (N10):

This program provides 12 months of CN coverage if the mother was enrolled in an Apple Health program when the child was born. There is no resource or income limit for this program.

Apple Health for Kids (N11, N31):

This program provides CN coverage to children under age 19 whose families have income at or below 210% of the FPL. Children who would have been eligible for Apple Health for Kids except for not meeting the immigration status requirements receive CN coverage under state-funded Apple Health for Kids.

Apple Health for Kids with Premiums (N13, N33):

This program provides CN coverage to children under age 19 whose families have income above 210% and at or below 312% of the FPL in exchange for the monthly premium. Children who would have been eligible for Apple Health for Kids with premiums except for not meeting the immigration status requirements receive CN coverage under state-funded Apple Health for Kids with Premiums in exchange for the monthly premium.

Health care for pregnant women

Revised ~~September 8, 2014~~

Washington apple health – Eligibility for pregnant women

WAC 182-505-0115 Washington apple health -- Eligibility for pregnant women

Pregnancy Medical (N03, N23):

This program provides CN coverage with countable income at or below 193% of the FPL without regard to citizenship or immigration status. Once enrolled in Apple Health for Pregnant Women, the individual is covered regardless of any change in income through the end of the month after the sixtieth day after the pregnancy end date (e.g., pregnancy ends June 10, health care coverage continues through August 31). Women receive this post-partum coverage regardless of how the pregnancy ends.

Women who apply for Pregnancy Medical after the baby's birth may not receive postpartum coverage, but they may qualify for help paying costs related to the baby's birth if they submit the application within three months after the month in which the child was born.

To determine the pregnant woman's family size, include the number of unborn children with the number of household members (e.g., a woman living alone and pregnant with twins is considered a three-person household).
